Re: Notice of Violation of the Clean Air Act

Mr. Iannone and Mr. Carson:

The United States Environmental Protection Agency has investigated and continues to investigate eBay, Inc. ("eBay") for compliance with the Clean Air Act ("CAA" or "the Act"), 42 U.S.C. §§ 7401–7671q, and its implementing regulations. As summarized in this Notice of Violation, the EPA has determined that eBay sold or offered for sale, or caused the sale or offer for sale of parts or components for motor vehicles and engines that bypass, defeat, or render inoperative elements of design installed on motor vehicles and engines to meet emission standards promulgated under the CAA, and knew or should have known that these parts or components were offered for sale or installed for such use or put to such use. Therefore, eBay has violated Section 203(a)(3)(B) of the Act, 42 U.S.C. § 7522(a)(3)(B).

Law Governing Alleged Violations

This Notice of Violation arises under Part A of Title II of the Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 7521–7554, and the regulations promulgated thereunder. These laws were enacted to reduce air pollution from mobile sources of air pollution. In creating the Act, Congress found, in part, that "the increasing use of motor vehicles . . . has resulted in mounting dangers to the public health and welfare."<sup>1</sup> Congress' purpose in creating the Act, in part, was "to protect and enhance the quality of the Nation's air resources so as to promote the public health and welfare and the productive capacity of its population," and "to initiate and accelerate a national research and development program to achieve the prevention and control of air pollution."<sup>2</sup>

The EPA's allegations here concern parts or components for motor vehicles and engines subject to emission standards.<sup>3</sup> The Act requires the EPA to prescribe and revise, by regulation, standards applicable to the emission of any air pollutant from new motor vehicles or engines that cause or contribute to air pollution, which may reasonably be anticipated to endanger public health or welfare.<sup>4</sup> As required by the Act, the emission standards "reflect the greatest degree of emission reduction achievable through the application of [available] technology."<sup>5</sup> Motor vehicles and engines are subject to specific emission standards for each pollutant, based on a vehicle's or engine's class and model year.<sup>6</sup>

Vehicle and engine manufacturers employ many devices and elements of design to meet emission standards. Element of design means "any control system (i.e., computer software, electronic control system, emission control system, computer logic), and/or control system calibrations, and/or the results of systems interaction, and/or hardware items on a motor vehicle or motor vehicle engine."<sup>7</sup> For example, manufacturers often employ retarded fuel injection timing systems as a primary emission-related element of design to achieve reduction of emissions of oxides of nitrogen ("NOx") and particulate matter ("PM"). Manufacturers also employ certain hardware devices as emission control systems and elements of design to reduce emissions of regulated pollutants into the ambient air. Examples of such devices include sensors, filtration systems such as diesel particulate filters ("DPF"), also referred to as periodic trap oxidizers ("PTOX"), exhaust gas recirculation ("EGR") systems, and catalyst devices such as diesel oxidation catalysts ("DOC," also referred to as "CAT"), NOx adsorption catalysts ("NAC"), and selective catalytic reduction ("SCR") systems. Modern vehicles and engines are equipped with devices known as electronic control modules ("ECMs"). ECMs continuously monitor engine and other operating parameters and control the emission control devices, such as the fueling strategy.

Manufacturers further employ onboard diagnostics, or "OBD," which is comprised of systems that monitor components that can affect the emission performance of a motor vehicle, detect problems with the vehicle's emission-related systems that could cause the vehicle to fail to comply with the CAA's emission standards, alert drivers to these problems, and store electronically-generated malfunction information. If a problem is detected, the OBD system illuminates a warning indicator on the vehicle instrument panel to alert the driver, called a malfunction indicator light ("MIL") or check engine light ("CEL"). The OBD system also records diagnostics trouble codes ("DTCs") to provide ease of identification of the emission control problem for the mechanics to repair. OBDs may cause an engine power reduction (known as "limp mode") to prompt repair a missing or malfunctioning emission-related device or element of design. Given these functions, the OBD is part of a motor vehicle's emission control system.

To ensure that every new motor vehicle or motor vehicle engine sold, offered for sale, imported, delivered for introduction into commerce, or introduced into commerce in the United States (collectively, "introduced into commerce") satisfies applicable emission standards, the EPA runs a certification program for manufacturers. Under this program, the EPA issues certificates of conformity

<sup>6</sup> See, e.g., heavy-duty diesel engine emission standards at 40 C.F.R. §§ 86.004-11, 86.007-11, 86.099-11 and light-duty vehicle emission standards at 40 C.F.R. § 86.1811-04. See also 40 C.F.R. §§ 86.090-8 (1990 and later model year light-duty vehicles); 86.094-9 (1994 and later model year light-duty trucks); 86.001-9 (2001 and later model year light-duty trucks); 86.004-9 (2004 and later model year light-duty trucks); 86.091-10 (1991 and later model year Otto-cycle heavy-duty engines and vehicles); 86.008-10 (2008 and later model year Otto-cycle heavy-duty engines and vehicles).

(“COCs”), thereby qualifying motor vehicles and engines for introduction into commerce.<sup>8</sup> To obtain a COC, an original equipment manufacturer (“OEM”) must submit a COC application to the EPA for each engine family (also referred to as a test group) and each model year in which it intends to manufacture or import motor vehicles or engines for introduction into commerce. The COC application must include, among other things, identification of the covered engine family, a description of the motor vehicle or engine and its emission control systems, all auxiliary emission control devices (“AECDs”)<sup>9</sup> and the engine parameters they sense, as well as test results from a test vehicle or engine showing that it satisfies the applicable emission standards.<sup>10</sup> The motor vehicles or motor vehicle engines must then be manufactured exactly as described in the COC application, in part to ensure that the emission control systems function as described.

In addition, the Act makes it a violation “for any person to manufacture or sell, or offer to sell, or install, any part or component intended for use with, or as part of, any motor vehicle or motor vehicle engine, where a principal effect of the part or component is to bypass, defeat, or render inoperative any device or element of design installed on or in a motor vehicle or motor vehicle engine in compliance with regulations under this subchapter, and where the person knows or should know that such part or component is being offered for sale or installed for such use or put to such use.”<sup>11</sup> It is also a violation to cause any of the foregoing acts.<sup>12</sup>

Alleged Violations

The EPA has determined that eBay has sold and/or offered for sale, or caused to be sold or offered for sale, numerous products (commonly referred to as “Defeat Devices”) that have a principal effect of bypassing, defeating, or rendering inoperative emission control devices and elements of design installed to control emissions of motor vehicles or motor vehicle engines to meet CAA certification standards. eBay’s website lists numerous Defeat Devices that are intended for use with a variety of motor vehicles and motor vehicle engines including, but not limited to, light-duty diesel trucks and engines manufactured by entities such as FCA US LLC, and its predecessors (“FCA”); General Motors Co. (“GM”); and Ford Motor Co. (“Ford”). eBay has sold three main categories of these “Defeat Device” products: (1) hardware parts or components that physically remove, disable, or bypass one or more components of the EGR system installed on or in a motor vehicle and or motor vehicle engines (“EGR Delete Parts”); (2) hardware parts or components that physically replace exhaust aftertreatment emission control devices or elements of design, such as the DPF, DOC, NAC, or SCR, from the exhaust system installed on or in a motor vehicle or motor vehicle engine (“Exhaust Aftertreatment Delete Pipes”); and (3) aftermarket ECM programs (commonly referred to as a “tune” or “calibration”) either distributed in a console (commonly referred to as a “tuner” or “programmer”) or transmitted electronically via weblink or email, which modify a motor vehicle’s original ECM programming or calibrations and/or OBD operation and thereby bypass, defeat, or render inoperative devices or elements of design, including EGR, DOC, DPF, NAC, SCR, or OBD systems, or fuel injection timing calibrations, installed on or in motor vehicles or motor vehicle engines (“Defeat Tuning Products”).

Between approximately July of 2019 and February of 2020, the EPA conducted a review of eBay’s website for advertisements using keyword search terms in eBay’s search engine. Such keyword searches included terms such as “EGR delete,” “DPF delete,” and other commonly used names and references for Defeat Devices or Defeat Device functions. Additionally, eBay posts the recent quantity of sales of products advertised. The EPA considers each sale of a Defeat Device from eBay’s website to be a violation of the CAA.

As listed in Table 1 below, the EPA’s review found that eBay sold or caused the sale of at least 39,759 separate Defeat Devices, including: 22,691 EGR Delete Parts; 10,321 Delete Package products;<sup>13</sup> 3,680 Exhaust Aftertreatment Delete Pipes; and 3,067 Defeat Tuning Products. Table 1 includes the corresponding quantity of sales of such products reported in the related advertisements listed on eBay’s webpage.

<sup>13</sup> A Delete Package consists of multiple Defeat Devices such as a Defeat Tuning Product, an Exhaust Aftermarket Delete Pipe, and/or one or more EGR Delete Parts, bundled together for sale. Sale and/or offer of sale of each Defeat Device is a separate offense subject to penalty under section 205(a) of the CAA, 42 U.S.C. § 7524. The number of “Delete Package Products” identified in this table is an estimate of the number of individual Defeat Tuning Products, Exhaust Aftermarket Delete Pipes, and EGR Delete Parts included the Delete Packages sold. We did not attempt to specifically identify which of the Delete Package Products belong to what Defeat Device category. This table is an estimate only and may not account for all of the Defeat Devices that are included in a given Delete Package.

The Defeat Devices identified in Tables 1 and 2 each have a principal effect of bypassing, defeating, or rendering inoperative devices or elements of design installed on or in a motor vehicle or motor vehicle engine in compliance with Title II of the CAA.

eBay knew or should have known that these products were offered for sale, sold, or installed to bypass, defeat, or render inoperative elements of design that control emissions of regulated air pollutants from motor vehicles or motor vehicle engines. eBay has published a “Catalytic converter and test pipes policy,” on its website. See <https://www.ebay.com/help/policies/prohibited-restricted-items/catalytic-converter-test-pipes-policy?id=4306#section3>. eBay indicates on this webpage that it does not allow the sale of the following:

- Oxygen sensor simulators;
- Malfunction indicator light eliminators;
- Anything that indicates it will defeat, bypass, or shut down emission control devices.

Notwithstanding the above assertions, the EPA has found that thousands of Defeat Devices on eBay’s website are easily located and identified through eBay’s website search engine using common search terms for Defeat Devices.

Moreover, eBay’s advertising for many of the Defeat Devices offered for sale on its website prominently state in the product name and/or description that such products facilitate the removal, bypass, or “deletion” of a diesel truck’s emission control devices or elements of design. Several examples of these statements published on eBay’s website including the following excerpts:

In sum, the EPA finds that eBay sells, offers to sell, or causes the sale or offer of sale of easily-identifiable Defeat Devices despite its asserted policy to prevent sales of Defeat Devices on its website.

Enforcement

Note that the EPA did not conduct an exhaustive search to identify and catalogue every Defeat Device offered for sale on eBay's website during the review timeframe of approximately July 2019 to February 2020. Our investigation of eBay's compliance with the CAA continues. The actual number of Defeat

Devices sold or caused to be sold by eBay is likely much higher for the listed products than what is identified in the Tables above. The EPA expects the company to take prompt measures to cease committing violations and come into compliance with the CAA.

The EPA may bring an enforcement action for these violations, and other violations it identifies, under its administrative authority or by referring this matter to the United States Department of Justice with a recommendation that a civil complaint be filed in federal district court.<sup>19</sup> Persons violating Sections 203(a)(3)(B) of the Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 7522(a)(3)(B), are subject to an injunction under Section 204 of the Act, 42 U.S.C. § 7523, and a civil penalty of up to $4,819 for each violation.<sup>20</sup>

The EPA is available to discuss this matter with you in further detail upon your request. Please contact Brianna Iddings, the EPA attorney assigned to this matter, within 14 days of receipt of this Notice of Violation. Ms. Iddings can be reached at 202-564-7581 or iddings.brianna@epa.gov.

The EPA acknowledges that the COVID-19 pandemic may be impacting your business. If that is the case, we will consider your specific circumstances in scheduling a conference with you to discuss this Notice of Violation, while still ensuring that the Agency can resolve the violations identified in this Notice of Violation and confirm your company's future compliance with the CAA.

Sincerely,

Evan Belser
